

Donderbluff

Capital city of the Thaté \(Halfings\) people. The city is situated on top of a large plateau that has a huge windmill built into it. It's the location of most of the aviation industry that exists as well. The Thate view flight as the ultimate form of freedom and make a pilgrimage once in their lives if they are able to partake in a ride through the skies around the area.

The city is a hub for trade and spiritual practice for the Thate. It is also the most common resting place of Hondje, the guardian of the Thate people.
